

Lightforth — Objection Handling Guide

Overview

Proven responses to the objections a rep actually hears from job seekers (and from coach/organization buyers). Use the L.A.R.C. framework: Listen, Acknowledge, Respond, Confirm.

Price Objections

"It's too expensive"

Framework: Reframe on cost-per-outcome, not monthly price.

1. Acknowledge: "I hear you — $79 a month is real money."
2. Reframe: "What's one job offer worth to you, though?"
3. Quantify: "If Premium gets you the offer even two weeks sooner, it's already paid for itself many times over."
4. De-risk: "And it's month-to-month — cancel anytime, no contract."

Example: "I hear you. But what's one job worth to you? If this gets you hired two weeks sooner, it's already paid for itself — and you're never locked in past a month."

"I can't afford it right now"

Framework: Offer the real, immediate alternative.

1. Acknowledge: "Totally understand — money's tight during a search."
2. Offer: "Start with the free tier and Pro's 14-day trial — no card needed to try it."
3. Reframe: "If it helps you land something faster, it pays for itself out of your first paycheck."

"Your competitor is cheaper"

Framework: Differentiate on what's actually included.

1. Acknowledge: "Price matters, I get it."
2. Differentiate: "What are they including — just a resume tool, or the whole funnel through the live interview?"
3. Reframe: "We're not the cheapest resume tool. We're the only one that's still with you once you're in the actual interview."

"Isn't this cheating?" (the #1 objection unique to this product)

Framework: Answer directly, don't dodge.

1. Acknowledge: "That's the first thing most people ask, and it's a fair question."
2. Reframe: "Copilot doesn't put words in your mouth you don't mean. It surfaces the relevant point from your own resume and experience — fast, in the moment nerves make you blank."
3. Normalize: "Most people don't fail interviews because they don't know the answer. They fail because they freeze. This fixes the freeze, not the honesty."

Example: "Fair question. It's not feeding you a script — it's pulling from your own real experience, faster than nerves let you recall it yourself. You still have to actually be the person who did the work."

"I can do this myself"

"I can write my own resume"

1. Acknowledge: "You know your experience better than anyone."
2. Reframe: "The hard part isn't writing — it's re-matching the exact keywords an ATS is scanning for, for every single posting. That's the part that's genuinely tedious to do by hand 40 times."
3. Ask: "How many versions of your resume do you have right now?"

"I don't need Auto-Apply, I'll apply myself"

1. Acknowledge: "Totally your call."
 2. Reframe: "Most people using it aren't replacing their judgment — they're removing the hour of form-filling on jobs they've already decided to apply to."
 3. Reassure: "And you approve every application before it goes out — nothing submits on its own."

Timing Objections

"I need to think about it"

1. Acknowledge: "Totally fair, it's your money."
2. Uncover: "What specifically do you want to think through?"
3. Redirect: "The 14-day trial is free, no card needed — would it make more sense to just try it on your next real application instead of deciding in the abstract?"

"I'm not actively job searching yet"

1. Understand: "When are you planning to start?"
 2. Create relevance: "A tailored resume takes 10 minutes now — worth having ready before you need it?"
 3. Offer: "Start free, upgrade when you're actually applying."

"I already tried a similar tool"

"I tried [Teal / Kickresume / Jobscan] and it didn't work"

1. Understand: "What was missing?"
 2. Differentiate: "Most of those stop at the resume or the score — they don't follow you into the actual live interview. That's usually the real gap."
 3. Offer proof: "Would seeing Copilot live in a mock interview change your mind?"

Authority / Buy-In Objections

"I need to talk to my partner/family about the money"

1. Acknowledge: "Makes sense, that's a real household decision."
 2. Equip: "Want me to send a one-pager on the plans and what's included so it's an easy conversation?"
 3. Propose: "The 14-day trial doesn't need a card, so there's no financial decision yet if you want to try it together first."

Bundle / Organization Objections (Coaches, Bootcamps, Career Centers)

"My budget for tools is already committed this year"

1. Understand: "When does your budget reset?"
2. Quantify: "What's the cost of your placement rate staying flat vs. giving your cohort a tool that reinforces coaching between sessions?"
3. Offer: "Would a smaller pilot bundle (5-9 seats) make sense to test with one cohort first?"

"Will this replace what I do as a coach?"

1. Acknowledge: "Great question — it's a fair concern."
2. Reframe: "It's not a replacement for your judgment and relationship with your students. It's what fills the gap between your sessions, when you can't personally run 30 mock interviews in the same week."

"How do I know my students will actually use their seats?"

1. Acknowledge: "Fair — unused seats are wasted money."
2. Offer: "The admin view shows seat activation, so you can follow up with anyone who hasn't started. And unused seats can be reassigned anytime."

Common Mistakes to Avoid

- Don't dodge the "is this cheating" question — answer it head-on, every time it comes up
- Don't lead with price — lead with the actual gap (ATS matching, live interview support), then land on price
- Don't oversell Auto-Apply as "fully automatic" — always mention the approval step, it builds trust
- Don't forget to propose the trial as the next step, not a vague "let me know"
